

Sheriff's Deputy And a Cab Driver Each Shot in Arm

Alleged Marksman Who Wanted Cabby's Auto, and Then Resisted Arrest, Jailed

CONTINUED FROM PAGE ONE

ant, his girl companion, and the man's mother in the car.

When they got to the hospital, Campbell said, he was told, "Tommy, there isn't any use in your getting shot twice. I'm going to use your car. Go on into the hospital."

So, says Campbell, he went into the hospital and the assailant drove off in the car.

Officers say he took his mother home, then drove to a dance hall with his girl. The sheriff's office was notified, and Brownlow and Deputy Emmons arrived together at the man's home, saw the taxi in the yard and went in.

Brownlow Is Wounded

The man and the girl were in a room together, the door partly open, the mother outside. Brownlow approached the half-open door and started in, he said. The man, seated, pistol in hand, fired at him, the bullet striking Brownlow in the right arm, the officer said. The assailant then slammed the door shut. Brownlow said he called to the girl to get the pistol and bring it out, which she did. He and Emmons then handcuffed the man and took him to jail.

He said the prisoner had been drinking.

The bullet struck the cuff of the officer's coat sleeve, bruised his wrist, ripped the seam for several inches, went inside the sleeve past the elbow, then cut his shirt sleeve and coat, slashed the biceps, and bounced against his shoulder. Brownlow shook his arm, and the bullet, which had stopped at his shoulder after being slowed down by passing through several folds of cloth, fell down his sleeve into his open hand.

Clipped By:

gene

Sat, Aug 29, 2015